larking was going on Potter sang out to his partner to have the noise stopped. He asked his partner if he wasn't running the house at the time, and said that if he (Charley) couldn't or wouldn't stop it he himself would. Howard told Potter that he had better try it. Potter anpresented his revolver and said: "You don't leave here I'll put a hole through you." Howard retreated slowly and told Potter that he would be back soon. Potter commenced playing again; in fifteen or twenty minutes Howard came back again, opened the door, with his right hand, holding a pistol in his left, and said: "Potter, I'm here now, God d—n you; turn yourself loose!" Some other parties, who were playing with Potter, sang out to Howard not to shoot. He parties, who were playing with Potter, day before. The temperature was dedidn't shoot for perhaps half a minute. When Potter asked them to stop skylark-ing I think he spoke to them all—to no one in particular. They had been mak-ing this noise I think half an hour or more when Potter asked who was run-ning that house. When Howard told Potter that he had better try to stop it, he called Potter a s—n of a b—h.
